Kielce Pogrom Centrally Organized As Part Of Anti-Soviet Plan

In Poland's worst anti-Semitic outbreak since the end of the war two grotesquely cruel hoaxes played a prominent part in carrying out the plan of the anti-Jewish elements, says W. H. Lawrence, of the New York Times, writing from Kielce where the pogrom took place.

It was a cruel, bestial demonstration of the undoubted widespread anti-Semitic feeling throughout Poland and reflects the inability of the present regime to insure safety for inhabitants 110 miles from the capital.

All evidence available at Kielce from talks with surviving Jews, who number 114 and who are in protective custody, and with Polish officials points to the fact that this was a centrally organized, cold-blooded assault.

The first hoax was perpetrated by Henryk Blaszczyk, who explained his three-day absence in the country to his father with the assertion that he had been held in the Jewish headquarters in Kielce for three days but had managed to escape after having seen the bodies of fifteen children whom the Jews had killed.

This story spread through Kielce before the police even had been notified and although the boy's father admitted it was false the damage had been done.

Young Blaszczyk's story to the police and foreign correspondents was that he had been told to tell this falsification by a peasant with whom he had stayed in the country without his parents' permission.

When the story that Jews were [illegible] children spread [illegible] (Continued on Page Ten)

The second hoax succeeded. The men in Polish army uniforms went to the door of the Jewish house and persuaded a number of Jews, including Dr. Kahane, to leave on the promise of safe conduct through the mob. Instead, the Jews were turned over to the enraged crowd, which beat them to death with bricks, stones, iron bars and clubs.

At the scene of this attack Mr. Lawrence counted fourteen puddles of human blood. Stuck in one puddle was found notification from the central Jewish headquarters in Warsaw that the address of Anny Freedman, presumably desired by one of the victims whose identity is not known, was 747 Rosedale Avenue, care B. Weiss, New York 59.

Near by lay a letter written by Anna Paltunacher of 1265 Morningside Avenue, Manhattan.

At the same time that the attack was made on the Jews in central Kielce, where twenty-six were killed, there were assaults by other mobs telling the same false story against the Jews in the railway station in near-by Piekunow. Seven Jews were pulled from a train and killed.

One other Jew was killed at another suburban station.

The mobs in the various parts of the city and suburban area finally were put down and a curfew was imposed. The main road entrances to Kielce were blocked by militiamen demanding credentials.

A car carrying six foreign correspondents was admitted without difficulty to the tense, nervous city where they were received by the Vice Governor of Kielce Province, who specifically asked them not to use his name. He said he was married for execution by Fascist [illegible] (Continued on Page Ten)

Predicts Untold Suffering Without Aid Now

The problem of displaced persons and refugees requires immediate planning if the world is to avert in the future an even greater tragedy than that confronting it today, Herbert H. Lehman, former Governor of New York and former Director General of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, declared at a one-day meeting sponsored by the National Peace Conference at the National Board of the Y.W.C.A., in New York.

Mr. Lehman told 139 delegates from fifty-eight organizations that he was "disturbed at the very slow progress of the United Nations in setting up permanent and effective machinery for dealing with the tragic problem of displaced persons in Germany."

Regarding the international relief agency, Mr. Lehman said the final decision on continuance of aid to Europe and the Far East must be made when the UNRRA Council meets in Paris. He contended that the decision to provide further relief was political as well as humanitarian. He called on the United Nations to recognize that the countries of Europe receiving UNRRA aid were "almost entirely within the area where eastern and western interests meet with the greatest force."

"Repatriation is proceeding more slowly than was anticipated," he continued, "and it is fair to assume that by the end of the summer most of those who can and will return to their homes will have been repatriated. There will probably remain a hard core of considerably more than half a million people. Already the United

Britain Bars Wise And Lipsky From Palestine

Passport visas for a visit to Palestine were denied to Dr. Stephen S. Wise and Louis Lipsky, Zionist leaders, two hours after they had applied to the British Embassy in Washington. Dr. Wise made the disclosure and, in a statement issued in his study at 40 West Sixty-eighth Street, New York, protested in behalf of himself and Mr. Lipsky, both of whom are American members of the executive of the Jewish Agency, the official organization recognized by the British Government on matters dealing with Jewish settlement in Palestine.

Dr. Wise is a former president of the Zionist Organization of America, a co-chairman of the American Zionist Emergency Council, president of the World Jewish Congress and president of the American Jewish Congress. He is also president of the Jewish Institute of Religion and was for many years rabbi of the Free Synagogue. Mr. Lipsky is also a prominent Zionist leader and a former president of the Zionist Organization of America.

A spokesman for the British Information Service in New York commented:

"The telephone call regarding a Palestine visa for Dr. Wise was made to the British Embassy in Washington and the caller was informed at the time that, on instructions from London, no visas are being issued for Palestine now."

The spokesman added that no discrimination had been practiced against Dr. Wise.

In the expectation that the visas would be granted, the British Em[illegible] two others were Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, president of the Zionist Organization of America, and Dr. (Continued on Page Nine)

Jews Fight Each Other In Rome

A meeting sponsored by the three main Jewish organizations in Italy to protest the treatment of the Jewish Agency by the British in Palestine was marred by violent fights among contending Jewish factions during which one man was severely injured by a club and scores of others were hurt.

About 6,000 youthful Jews, mostly displaced persons from camps around Rome, gathered at the Arch of Titus, whose sculptures recall the conquest and pillage of Jerusalem by the Romans, and adopted a motion condemning the British Government before the fighting began and the meeting broke up in confusion. Pamphlets were distributed saying: "Jews, give all your support to your clandestine government in order to fight and win."

The manifestation was promoted by the new emergency committee appointed by the three Jewish and Zionist organizations in Rome. The original plan called for a parade, but this had to be abandoned because, according to the Jewish leaders, "pressure had been brought to bear on the Italian Government," which forbade it. The participants, some of whom had the serial numbers of German concentration camps branded on their arms, marched to the Arch in military formation by threes, carrying posters with such slogans as "We don't need the British army in Palestine" and "6,000,000 exterminated Jews call for justice."

Arab Revolt Idea Dropped For Now

An organized Arab revolt in Palestine, to be supported by all Arab League states, was advocated at a recent meeting of the Arab League's Council in Bludan, and the idea was abandoned only after protracted argument.

Angry and frustrated, some League members proposed that the Arabs forthwith take up the fight in Palestine, that the Palestinian Arabs receive military training and that neighboring states send volunteers and arms to Palestine. They were persuaded to exhaust all diplomatic measures before counselling war in Palestine.

Similar proposals were discussed at meetings of the king, presidents and princes of the Arab states in Cairo. At one time it was reported that they were considering a communiqué announcing "our intention to declare war on these illegal (Palestine Zionist) forces because their existence marks a permanent danger threatening the safety of our countries and governments."

Most informed sources agree that the Arabs are ill prepared to [illegible] battle in Palestine, especially [illegible] the tightly organized [illegible] and highly armed [illegible] armies. Almost no non-Zionist observer seems to doubt, however, that they will be angry enough to fight if the [illegible] the Anglo-[illegible] of Inquiry [illegible]

Want Labor Synagogues Created

A collective social system for Palestine as "the homeland of the Jewish people" and "the spiritual centre of Israel, where the Jewish religious way of life and our ethical ideals will infuse all aspects of the national life" was advocated by Rabbi Robert Gordis, retiring president of the Rabbinical Assembly of America, in New York.

In criticism of educational projects conducted at Jewish centres, Dr. Gordis said: "It is not adult Jewish education to have lecturers speak on penguins in Tasmania or mules in Patagonia, or even the independence of China or the glories of the Soviet Union."

He recommended instead the teaching of "Judaism, Jewish history, Jewish customs and philosophy." He called for the creating of new congregations, particularly labor synagogues. He urged a national youth camp be started for Conservative Judaism where young men and women could be sent on a scholarship basis. He recommended also Jewish day schools for children from 5 to 8, after which they might be sent to public schools, continuing to attend Hebrew schools in the afternoons.

A cantorial institute and a rabbinical graduate school at the seminary also were urged. Institutes for personal counselling for the "spiritually homeless and storm-tossed among our people," were recommended. The Assembly and the United Synagogue of American were urged to set up a program of religious vitalization with brief daily noonday services and discussion periods in large cities. Such discussions might help answer questions for youth, Rabbi Gordis felt.

Rabbi Gordis asked for a pronouncement on Zionism and suggested a program for the Assembly, urging rethinking of the conception of the members of this movement and a reappraisal of their relationship to it.

"Palestine must not become a mere replica of the capitalism of the West or the 'Communism' of Russia," he continued. "It must be encouraged to maintain and develop an economic system based upon social justice, justice expressed in economic and producers' (Continued on Page Ten)

Young Musicians Help Europe To Live Again

Eugene List, pianist, who, as a U.S. Army enlisted man, played for the Big Three Conference at Potsdam in July, 1945; and his wife, Carroll Glenn, violinist, returned to La Guardia Field from a concert tour of Europe. They appeared together at the International Music Festival at Prague and on a tour sponsored by the United States War and State Departments that took them to Budapest, Vienna, Berlin, The Hague, Paris, Rome and London.

The young artists reported a "genuine, real and widespread" enthusiasm for contemporary American music and an "astonishingly" warm reception of their own playing everywhere they appeared. In Prague the audience, rushing down the aisles to the platform at the end of the concert, refused to go even after the piano had been closed and the lights turned off. In Rome, Miss Glenn said, the audience was "unbesitatingly vocal" after the performance, calling loudly for "Gershwin, Gershwin".

In Prague, where the festival also marked the fiftieth anniversary of the Prague Philharmonic Orchestra, Mr. List and Miss Glenn appeared with the Prague Philharmonic. The orchestra was led by Leonard Bernstein, pianist, composer, conductor, and director of the New York City Centre Orchestra, who, with Samuel Barber, composer, made up the remainder of the American contingent at the festival. Miss Glenn and Mr. Bernstein [illegible]

Mr. List also was the first American instrumentalist to appear in Budapest and Berlin since the war. In Budapest they appeared with the orchestra of the Royal Budapest Opera.

Defend Faith Groups Among Teachers

Replying to criticism by some organizations and individuals in recent months, the Coordinating Committee of Teachers' Religious Associations has issued a report denying that the existence of teacher organizations representing the Catholic, Jewish and Protestant faiths constitutes a "divisive" element in the New York City public school system.

It has been charged by critics of the religious associations that the existence in the public school system of such groups led to the growth of suspicion, intolerance and ill-will among teachers of the three faiths and that eventually these feelings were generated among the pupils.

"In an age when animosity and hatred have been used as the most potent weapons for starting a world-wide war and may be so used for nullifying a just peace," the report said, "it is not surprising that instances should have occurred within the last few years which seemed to reveal unfriendly [illegible]

Among the objectives which the committee considers within its scope are the dissemination of information and materials to further friendship among teachers of all faiths; to stress common ideals and hopes; and to clarify and adjust "misrepresentations" and "incidents."

"The very existence of a conference group like this coordinating committee," the report contended, "nullifies the argument that religious associations are divisive; in fact, we might modestly assert that the religious groups have provided an example that might well be followed by groups having only secular motivation.

"Nor can it be alleged that adherence to such religious groups provides a narrowing influence in the lives of teachers. On the contrary, it opens to them and to the students they teach in school and after-school classes the full riches of those spiritual ideas and teachings on which Western civilization has been nourished through the centuries.

"Each in his own way, according to [illegible] has as part of his teaching background a [illegible] deavor to blot out in the name of monolithic uniformity, those varied religious and racial contributions that have made America great."

In a foreword to the report, Superintendent of Schools John E. Wade said that the "aggressive and constructive program of the religious associations" was one of "the most encouraging indications of a positive approach to the problem of the development of proper human relations."

Zionists Ask Millions For Settling Jews In Palestine

The "workmanlike suggestions" concerning the problem of transfering 100,000 Jews to Palestine that President Truman said had previously been made to him by the American members of the Executive of the Jewish Agency, were released to the public.

Details from the letter sent to President Truman on June 14, show an estimate of between $35,000,000 and $45,000,000 in the way of international "public assistance" for the 100,000 immigrants in 1946. This was split into $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 for transportation; $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 for maintenance, medical care, rehabilitation and training, and $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 for immediate clothing and minimum household utensils and furniture.

As part of their letter, Dr. Nahum Goldmann, Louis Lipsky, Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise said that German reparations should be used as a matter of "simple equity" to pay for the care of orphaned children sent to Palestine.

The reception of 100,000 immigrants, it was said, presented no special problem because 65,000 were admitted in 1935, when the economic base was smaller than now.

Out of the 100,000, it was stated, there would be 50,000 to 55,000 suitable for gainful employment; and also 25,000 children. The Jewish Agency plans to absorb approximately 10,000 of the gainful workers into agriculture. Perhaps 28,000 would go into manufacture and construction; and 17,000 to 22,000 in all other occupations.

Fortunately, said the signers, Palestinian economy could absorb the new workers.

"We request international financial assistance during 1946 to meet the three categories of Jewish relief and rehabilitation requirements," said the letter. "A very large part of comparable expenditures is now being borne by the United States Army in occupied Europe and by UNRRA in other countries. We request similar assistance for those 100,000 Jewish immigrants in Palestine.

"By including 25,000 orphaned children among the 100,000 initial immigrants, the Jewish community is assuming a far greater financial burden than that involved in the three items indicated above as appropriate claimants for international assistance during 1946."

Housing the 100,000 immigrants, even in a very congested manner, would cost at least $40,000,000, the letter stated. Details of material needed were given, but it was suggested that these could not be obtained without Government assistance, that is, priorities. Some $10,000,000 would be spent immediately for farm equipment, and perhaps $25,000,000 before all needs were met.

Maybe $20,000,000 or $25,000,000 would go into the first installment of a large irrigation scheme. Industrial expansion was estimated at $25,000,000 to $30,000,000. Non-residential construction was set at $20,000,000 to $30,000,000.

"The total amounts required during the next decade are large," the letter stated. "Part of the capital will come from new savings in Palestine, part from the over $500,000,000 of sterling balances Palestine holds in London, from the inflow of private investment capital, from world Jewish contributions, from reparations and from public lending institutions. In the field of public lending, we look immediately to the Export-Import Bank of Washington and later to the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development."

Charges Number Of Returnees Falsified

Reuters, the semi-official British news agency was charged with deliberately falsifying a news report in connection with the article that 2,000 Austrian Jews were seeking to return from Palestine. The charge was made by the World Jewish Congress.

"Only last week, Reuters distributed a dispatch from Tel Aviv that set many people wondering," the Congress declared. "The dispatch stated that nearly two thousand Jews from Austria, who had come to Palestine before the outbreak of the war, had applied for permission to return.

"The report did not seem plausible at first glance. Even though it could be assumed that some might wish to return . . . the number of two thousand appeared to be way out of proportion. It seemed unbelievable, especially since all of them had come to Palestine at least eight years ago, and had in the meantime managed to become integrated economically and socially.

"Now it is reported from another source that the number wishing to go back is only about ninety, four and a half per cent of the figure cited in the Reuters' dispatch. It is highly improbable that this error in ninety-five and a half per cent was accidental. It should rather be looked upon as a link in the long chain of events and actions whose aim it is to discourage Jewish immigration to Palestine."

TIMMINS YOUTH PAYS DEBT BY SAVING YOUNGSTER'S LIFE

ALPHONSE DESJARDINS WINS Dow Award

THE DOW AWARD
is a system for outstanding heroism and the slender, as a tangible expression of appreciation. A $100 Victory Bond. Winners are selected by The Dow Award Committee, a group of citizens of leading Montreal daily newspapers.

LAST December, Mayor Brunette of Timmins, Ontario, saved a young accident victim's life. Last month, Alphonse Desjardins, the older brother of that victim, repaid the Mayor for his good deed.

The Mayor's 3-year-old son was playing in the sun near Gillies Lake. Like most children he was fascinated by the water . . . and, suddenly, as his curiosity brought him to the edge of the dock, he lost his balance and fell in.

Desjardins, playing ball nearby, heard screams. Racing to the dock he saw the baby struggling in the water — face down! Without hesitating, Desjardins plunged in and brought the boy to the shore . . . then helped giving artificial respiration until the lad was revived.

For his presence of mind and quick thinking, we are proud to present The Dow Award to Alphonse Desjardins.

Refugee, Now Canadian, Goes Back To Help Needy Youngsters

Mrs. Elsa Margo has been happy in Canada since she first came here from Germany a few months before the war broke out. She has served this country during the war and is proud of the citizenship papers which she has received from Ottawa. Now she will be going back as a Canadian in the service of the Canadian Jewish Congress. She will be attached, like 110 other trained and experienced workers, to the staff of the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee with its European headquarters in Paris. She hopes that her work will be with children and that her nursing experience will be utilized.

A native of the Danzig Corridor, she had begun to study nursing in a Red Cross Hospital in Berlin. After she married a young lawyer and notary she made her home in Essen on the Ruhr. She recalls the days after the last World War when inflation of the market and the black market brought great suffering to Germany. She was then a voluntary worker with the American Quakers in Essen, assisted at children's clinics and helped to distribute milk to the undernourished.

Hitler was already on the march, but as she recalls it now, it seems strange to her that no one took him seriously and counted on the basic good sense and decency of the German people as a protection against his ambitions. Mrs. Margo remembers a visit to the Chateau of the [illegible] only a few months before war broke out and soon after they entered the Department of National War Services where their knowledge of English, French, German and Dutch proved very useful.

One of the treasured possessions which she managed to get out of Germany is an old Scroll of the Law, a handwritten Pentateuch on parchment which the grandfather of Mr. Margo had had written in his home more than a century ago in accordance with Jewish tradition. The Tol searched their home just before they left but a Christian friend of Mrs. Margo sat on the box holding the Scroll and its silver ornaments and flirted with the agent. She diverted his attention from the case and the sacred Scroll passed through the [illegible]

there was a general [illegible] in the Jewish community, that his acts would not be as extreme and as cruel as he had forewarned. But the Nazi poison was at work and by 1935 the Margos were beginning to feel the discomforts of the totalitarian state. Their friends began to look the other way when they met them on the street and hesitated to meet with them socially because they were Jews. Mr. Margo's practice fell off under the tightening boycott and rocks were thrown into their home. Only two or three of their closest friends remained loyal and one of them later even helped to smuggle some of their possessions out of the country after they had emigrated.

The Margos moved to Berlin where she entered the physiotherapy school and clinic of Dr. Ernest Bergman, now professor at New York University. Patients from all over the world came there, including Hollywood actors and the French ambassador to Berlin. By 1938 persecution in Germany became intensified. The clinic closed and Dr. Bergman emigrated. Mrs. Margo began to look for ways of quitting the country. She studied English at a special school for prospective emigrants where technicians were taught the terms of their trades in other countries. The ORT gave courses on vocational training and those who hoped to reach Palestine were taught Hebrew and the traditions of the Holy Land.

Later in the year Mrs. Margo was enabled to go to England to arrange for her emigration, but her plan from the beginning was to get to Canada. Her interest in the country was whetted by a Canadian chemistry student she met in Berlin. But above all she felt intuitively that the Nazi menace would not long remain confined to the borders of Germany. She sought to get as far away as possible and felt that the ocean was not too wide to separate her from Hitlerism. No part of Europe seemed safe for civilization. She came to Canada with her husband

Sir Frederick Grant Banting—A Tribute. By W. E. Robinson.

+ + + An Achievement-and an Inspiration + + +

MAY 16TH, 1921, he stood in a small, dingy room in the Medical Building of the University of Toronto, a self-appointed seeker, untitled, unpaid, but sustained by a conviction that he was on the track of a great discovery.

His name was Frederick Grant Banting, Canadian Surgeon, and he had sold his office furniture and instruments to provide funds for his living costs.

He believed he had the key to the dread riddle of diabetes, a disease that had baffled medical science since the dawn of history. Medical opinion was skeptical, but physiologists and biochemists added their efforts and soon the rumour was whispered in hospitals and stricken homes "Banting of Toronto has discovered a treatment for diabetes".

From all over the continent, haggard, doomed diabetics came to Toronto, hoping against hope, their very lives at stake in Banting's grim race to perfect Insulin in time.

The rest is history, as is the fact that Sir Frederick Grant Banting died as he had lived—in the service of his country and of humanity. Today, 25 years after his discovery, his work has saved uncounted thousands of lives, and the story of his achievements has become a glowing example and an inspiration to all Canadians . . . giving us an assurance of an ever-increasing measure of health and prosperity in the Canada Unlimited of the future.

Some Who Were Reached For Rescue

By Julian Louis Meltzer, In The New York Times Magazine

One morning about two years ago a group of thirty children, pallid and emaciated, clad in tattered apologies for garments, arrived at Haifa in Palestine after a six weeks journey by boat and rail. Their faces were expressionless. They had remained silent for the most part of the journey down the Black Sea from the port of Sulina, on the northern coast of Rumania, through the Bosporus to Turkey and then after an interval, by rail across Asia Minor and through Syria and Lebanon to Palestine.

They were dressed exactly the same as on the day they were brought back across the Dniester to Rumania from the deportation areas. For the most part orphans, whose parents were killed or died in the wastes of Transdnistria since their expulsion from Bukovina in 1941, some had seen their fathers and mothers and other close kin shot down or left to die by the wayside when they could not keep up with the marching column of miserable deportees.

Their rescue was engineered by a number of young Palestinian Jewish volunteers, men and women who had wormed their way into Rumania from Turkey, and gone about quietly collecting a boy here, a girl there, until they had assembled many small parties. Since that time many hundreds more have arrived in Palestine from eastern and southeastern Europe. They have come on legal immigrant ships or cramped in leaky converted tankers and cattle-boats. They have also come on the French luxury liner Champollion from Marseilles, or on the 200-ton motor schooner Kismet Adalia, renamed the Brigadier Orde Charles Wingate, on which twenty passengers would ordinarily have been a crowd but which carried twenty times that many.

In the Palestine Foundation Fund villages in the Plain of Esdraelon recently I saw some of the youngsters who had arrived two years ago. They were vigorous and healthy, bronzed by the sun, sparkling of eye and manner.

Youth immigration, or "Aliyah," is the organization which cheated Hitler out of eighteen thousand Jewish children from February, 1934, to date. The idea of "Aliyah", was conceived in Germany in 1932 for rescuing young victims of anti-Semitic measures. An organization was established to facilitate the transfer to Palestine of young people aged 15 to 17 years and to equip them for a productive life.

In Palestine itself a frail old lady from Baltimore, Henrietta Szold, then in her early seventies, agreed to take charge of the arrangements to tend, educate and rebuild the lives of the youngsters after their arrival. The scope of the scheme gradually extended until, in the war years, it became an imperative duty to save all the Jewish children. Miss Szold went on working indomitably at the great task of salvation until her death in Jerusalem in February last year.

Under Miss Szold's direction the organization was built up to take charge of every boy and girl. The age limit of 15 to 17 years was soon dropped as the Nazis began to cover Europe. Some children were as young as 2 years. They were placed in Palestine Foundation Fund villages, in schools, in homes.

The organization grew. It became responsible for the maintenance and education of all young new arrivals up to 18 who were without parents, and for children whose immigrant parents were unable to support them. The number of countries from which the children originated extended beyond Germany and Austria, the principal lands of child emigration before the war, and totaled thirty-eight. Palestine-born youngsters aged 14 to 16 also clamored to be placed on the land; they came from the underprivileged class in the towns, and they wanted to leave the slum quarters. In most of these Palestinian social cases, the children themselves turned up at the offices and insisted on being taken.

Miss Szold insisted that the children themselves choose the type of institution in which they wished to live. They could go into Orthodox Jewish villages, such as Kfar Ha'noar Ha'dati (Religious Youth Village), or the Labor and secular ones. Where a child or infant was too young to express a preference, its family background was investigated and the suitable type of place was chosen as carefully as if its parents were present to do the choosing.

Training centres were set up in the countryside, so that today there are immigrant children in training in a hundred and nine collective, communal and cooperative villages established by the Palestine Foundation Fund, and others in forty-eight separate educational institutions.

To provide for younger children, smaller homes were set up in different parts of the country. Most children to arrive in the war years had little or no schooling; a special syllabus was devised to meet their particular requirements. Children under 14 were given an ordinary elementary school education, with emphasis on the agricultural side in preparation for the final two-year farming course. Those above 14 had their learning divided between general high school subjects and practical vocational work, either in the fields or in workshops as fitted them.

As groups completed their training, their places were filled by new arrivals. Of the eleven thousand boys and girls who passed through Youth Immigration schooling and care, three-quarters selected farming as their future careers. Others chose to go into the towns as artisans, factory hands and nurses, some preferred the sea as fishermen and sailors.

Those who took up farming after graduation—about eight thousand—were given a third year's training on the land. Upon completing the course, they formed themselves into "gar'inim" (labor nuclei groups) and began preparing for permanent settlement on the land. Almost a dozen communal workers' villages were founded by the Youth Aliyah graduates since the outbreak of war with Palestine Foundation Fund assistance.

The cost of the scheme since 1934 has been $12,000,000 of which $8,000,000 has come from the United States (in the main from Hadassah Zionist women) and the remainder from Britain, South Africa and other countries. It costs $36 a month (at current sterling exchange) to maintain a child under 15 in an agricultural settlement $16 per month in the first year and $12 monthly in the second year for those of 15 and over.

The Youth Immigration movement, directed by a group of ardent people in Palestine and America, now has the fervent ambition of bringing twenty thousand children from Europe within a short time. A plan has been worked out for capital investment in buildings in villages and new institutions, and for other preliminary expenditure, for an aggregate $10,000,000 which would take care of the accommodation of the twenty thousand new charges. The annual upkeep would be $11,000,000.

The acting director of Youth Immigration in Palestine is Hans Beyth, who was associated with Henrietta Szold from the very early days of the scheme. Talking of the plan to bring another large youth group to the country, Mr. Beyth said:

"We have given nearly twenty thousand young people a home, security and education, and have prepared them for useful citizenship in communities of their own or as individuals. There is no reason why we should not be so successful with another twenty thousand, and in a much shorter time, if the funds are made available."

25 JEWS GRADUATE FROM WEST POINT

Twenty-five Jewish cadets, the largest number to be commissioned at one time in the history of the United States Military Academy, each received Jewish Publication Society Bibles from the National Jewish Welfare Board (JWB) at the graduation services of the Jewish Chapel Squad which preceded the annual commencement exercises. Each Bible had the name of the recipient inscribed on the cover in gold.

The services were conducted by Rabbi Marcus Kramer, of Poughkeepsie, N.Y., former Army chaplain, who, through the National Jewish Welfare Board regularly conducts services for the Jewish cadets at West Point. Rabbi William F. Rosenblum, of New York, a member of the Committee on Army and Navy Religious Activities of the National Jewish Welfare Board, preached the baccalaureate sermon. West Point now has the largest enrollment of Jewish cadets in its history.

Urges Plan Against Bigotry

Describing the Ku Klux Klan as an organization that feeds on quackery, hatred, intolerance and bigotry, Gov. Ellis Arnall, of Georgia, warned the Chicago campaign of the Joint Defense Appeal that there are still too many Americans who continue to give an ear to the KKK and other organizations peddling race hatred. More than 500 Chicago communal leaders pledged their support on behalf of the drive that maintains the work of the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith in fighting anti-Semitism and safeguarding democratic liberties.

To combat religious bigotry, Gov. Arnall cautioned against a complacent attitude. "It isn't wise," he said, "to sit back and do nothing under the impression that the ultimate good sense of the American people will be effectively brought into play."

The Southern liberal leader praised the work of agencies, like the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League, which conduct a program designed to interpret the ideals of democracy and to immunize the people against race hatred. He called the Klan "nothing more than a nuisance organization at present," but stressed that if its activities were allowed to proceed unhindered, it might become a thriving organization.

Arnall said that he is leading an attack on the Klan through the findings of secret agents of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation who have been placed in the Klan's membership, and by revoking, through legal means, the Klan's Georgia charter on the grounds that it is not a non-profit, non-partisan, fraternal and benevolent group, as claimed.

Receives N.Y. Law Post At 25

David Marcus, who is just twenty-five, has been appointed an assistant attorney general of New York State. Attorney General Nathaniel L. Goldstein, in making the announcement in Albany, noted that Mr. Marcus is the youngest appointee to the post since he took office in January, 1943. He added that it was in line with his policy to select top-notch law school graduates.

Mr. Marcus, who is unmarried and lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Marcus, at 20 Chestnut Hill Avenue, White Plains, N.Y., has been assigned to the litigations and claims bureau, in Albany.

He was born in Mount Kisco, where he attended the elementary and secondary schools. He studied for one year at Marietta (Ohio) College and then transferred to the University of Kentucky, from which he was graduated in 1943, after passing a year in the Army Air Forces. At Kentucky, where he worked his way through, he was a member of the debating team and on the varsity baseball squad.

Nahum Goldmann, a member of the world executive of the Jewish Agency.

At the last moment it was deemed unwise for all four to be out of the United States simultaneously. It was decided that Dr. Wise and Mr. Lipsky make the trip and the others remain. The announcement that they would go to Palestine was made last week, after all four had conferred with President Truman in Washington. Three days later the visas were applied for.

Dr. Wise said he did not intend to appeal to the U.S. State Department or to any of the major officials of the British Government. "I don't feel like begging favors," he said. He expressed the opinion that a great many people will feel deeply aggrieved at the refusal, says the New York Times.

KIELCE POGROM

In addition many Jewish survivors, weeping behind the iron bars of the security police jail in which they are held protectively, said that they would have been killed but for the intervention of the militia.

The fact still remains, however, that the mob gathered and succeeded in carrying out its purpose of killing Jews before the authorities could suppress it and that none of the rioters were killed.

What the Kielce events illustrate is that there is a large minority segment of the Polish population committed to the use of illegal means to exterminate Jews and to oppose the Soviet Union—which means, of course, they are against the present government.

This underground is not a part of Deputy Premier Stanislaw Mikolajesyk's party but it was an undoubted fact that the members would be willing to vote for him as the leader of the only legal opposition, despite their opposition to his party, its goals and methods.

In the Kielce area, for example, referendum results released by the Government showed 10 per cent of the eligible 900,000 voters opposed the Government on the question of approving the new Western boundary, despite the fact that all legal parties favored the proposition.

In the broadest sense the people of Poland and the Government must now face up to the tremendous problem of maintaining law and order.

The best known of these illegal bands is the NSZ, which keeps groups in the forests by day, while at night they emerge to raid and kill. It is probably not unlike the Ku Klux Klan at the height of its violent anti-Negro, anti-Catholic, anti-Jewish campaign in the South of the United States.

The Government insists that this is tied up directly with the London Poles, such as Gen. Vadislaw Anders' army, but the evidence is not sufficiently impressive yet to convince a neutral observer.

In Poland there live perhaps 100,000 Jews and it is the considered estimate of well-informed Polish officials that under the present conditions not more than 20 or 30 per cent of them wish to stay in Poland. Many undoubtedly want to go to Palestine, but others will settle for anything except Poland or Russia; the latter opposed because of economic hardship and lack of political freedom rather than anti-Semitism.

If, however, anti-Semitism, which is historic in Poland, could be rooted out, the same Government sources believe that 70 per cent of the present Jewish population would want to remain.

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without reason
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an easier."

Ever since the Labor Party conference at Bournemouth, England, when Ernest Bevin, Britain's foreign secretary, said: "Regarding the agitation in the United States, and particularly New York, for 100,000 Jews to be put into Palestine, I hope I will not be misunderstood in America if I say, with the purest of motives, that that was because they did not want too many of them in New York," many adjectives have been used to describe his remarks. This column agrees with all of them except those which are in the nature of hysterical screams or which imply that Bevin was offhand or carried away. It is hard to believe that Britain's present-day number one fellow was not weighing his words, although he may have been gambling on the effect they would have. The day they splattered all over, this column began a vacation in the States and has since collected a number of opinions on what Bevin said, for quotation here.

What Bevin said was brutal and shocking as though, if he had attacked with a weapon, it would have been a short and heavy stick of wood. It caused a tide of mortification and anger some of which was expressed with a comic opera touch. For example, America was insulted but resentment was expressed chiefly not by non-Jewish Americans but by Jews or politicians reading the lines which should have been spoken by others, or by others also. Judge Bernard A. Rosenblatt, of New York, president of the Palestine Foundation Fund, was a self-appointed spokesman for the citizens of New York. "Bevin's glib talk," he said, "about our desire for Palestine immigration because we do not want so many Jews in New York has been sufficiently answered by the Mayor of the City of New York and the two Senators from the Empire State."

Mayor O'Dwyer met the situation with righteous indignation. "New York City is proud of its Jewish people and with good reason. The people of New York do not feel as Mr. Bevin does. We do feel, however, that with the struggle going on everywhere in Europe, if 100,000 of these unfortunate people, who have gone through so much suffering, want to go to Palestine and the people of Palestine want them there, they should be helped to get there at the earliest possible moment." Senators and Congressmen from New York also upheld its fair name, reacting swiftly to Bevin's "gratuitous and studied insult to every American who believes in justice and fair play. It will not be excused or forgotten by people of every state."

Judge Joseph M. Proskauer, head of the American Jewish Committee, said that Bevin "should realize that the deep interest of the American people is born of the intense desire of the American people to save these sufferers from Hitler's tyranny, from further misery, wretchedness and death . . . by the implementation of the proposal with respect to the 100,000 Jews." Louis Hollander, president of the New York State CIO, said the Bevin remark was "not only a gratuitous insult to the American people but a complete repudiation of the Anglo-American Commission report on Palestine." The American Labor Party secretary, Hyman Blumberg, could not find in Bevin's remark anything resembling Labor Party principles or election platform.

Professor James H. Sheldon, Administrative Chairman of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League To Champion Human Rights, which, if this column is not mistaken, is backed by Jews, cabled a protest on Bevin's speech, saying in part: "The City of New York has been and is the haven for the oppressed of all creeds and nationalities and I believe I speak for the average American in expressing strong resentment at the unfriendly and uncalled-for interpretation which you have put upon a well-established American policy of friendship toward Jewish immigration into Palestine regarding which the position of the United States was thoroughly established even prior to the outbreak of the war."

"Bevin's astounding slur on America, his complete disregard of President Truman, and his off-handed dismissal of American labor's interest is a flagrant breach of friendship," said Joseph Schlossberg, national chairman of the National Committee for Labor Palestine.

In a masterpiece of whispered and refined objection, the Workmen's Circle, Jewish labor fraternal order of seventy thousand members, telegraphed to Prime Minister Attlee, in part: "We are at this moment pained by a most unfortunate reference made by the British Foreign Minister before the Labor Party conference which casts a patent slur upon the sincere desire of Americans to see 100,000 displaced Jews admitted into Palestine, and we wish to convey to you our vehement protest against this slanderous allusion."

Representative Emanuel Celler, of New York, said in a speech: "Now we are put off again. It is unseemly that the United States Government should allow itself to be pushed around this way."

Professor Joseph P. Chamberlain, of Columbia University, and chairman of the board of directors of National Refugee Service, Inc., a Jewish agency, stated that Mr. Bevin indicated by his speech that he is unaware of the humanitarian actions of the American Government and the people in the United States. The British Foreign Secretary's suggestion that the majority [illegible] New York City

Dr. David W. Bronstein, director of the American Jewish Congress, said: "The people will reject the Foreign Secretary's unprecedented calumnies."

The Synagogue Council of America "read with consternation" that Bevin had "once more struck an intemperate note with sinister implications that are calculated to sow seeds of divisiveness between the British and American peoples. . . . Mr. Bevin's assertion that the reason for Mr. Truman's demand that 100,000 displaced Jews be admitted to the Holy Land is an American desire to see them in Palestine rather than in New York is either a perverse slander on the American character or an attempt on the part of a British statesman to minimize the American repute for humanitarianism and decency. . . . The American people, with their sense of fair play and integrity in international affairs, will find it difficult to countenance alliance with a British leadership which seems in this regard to be morally bankrupt. . . ."

This column agrees with Rabbi Stephen Wise that Bevin's speech was "indecent" and with Judge Simon H. Rifkind that it was "barbarous". What its purpose was, this column does not know and can only guess at. Its effect was cruel and wounding. But there was one thing back of it which should not be obscured by clamor. Mr. Bevin was expressing an opinion not his alone when he implied that the United States talks big about providing a haven for persecuted Jews but, for all the figures and Truman's directive on immigration, and so on, not much is being done about it. It was several months before the much-talked of 39,000 refugees began to go forward to the United States and it has been estimated that the number will be in actuality only about 25,000 for this year.

Whatever its political purpose was, Bevin's speech remains a challenge to the United States to open wider the gates of the country regardless of, and aside from, its official policy toward the settlement of Jews in Palestine. Let average American non-Jews speak up for American principles of humanitarianism and see that some of them are put into practice. Giving homeless people a chance to live as their neighbors in a land of opportunity would be a practical demonstration beyond any doubt. f.f.c.
